Course Description

CRISIS COMMUNICATIONS AND THE MEDIA: FIRST YEAR

40-Hour Course, non POST-Certified

No POST reimbursement for tuition, lodging, or meals

This three-level course is designed for anyone who will be working with the media in times of crisis. Although this is the first in a three-part series, the First Year Course is not a basic course. The program emphasizes the importance of developing a Public Information Office Team, communications skills, teamwork, and leadership. You will participate in public speaking exercises and media interview sessions. Everyone is urged to be a part of several team building and "teamwork" exercises. Classroom sessions are information-intense, with breakout sessions designed to help you apply principles and techniques that are taught.

CSTI's many qualified instructors bring years of experience from a variety of public and private agencies. You will meet representatives from agencies typically involved in crisis of major proportions.
